I suggest we have a festival with traditional folk dancing called “bon-odori” as the main event. We should have food stands in the traditional Japanese style as well. It will be good for building connections in the community. Firstly, everybody, men, women, children, young and old, can join the circle of dance and enjoy themselves. Secondly, by dancing together to the music, we feel connected to other people and can soon make friends with them. It helps bring all kinds of people together. (83 words)

I'd like to have a library in my neighborhood. We'll have a lot of manga, children's picture books, magazines, and newspapers, so everybody from children to older adults can enjoy spending time there. One of the advantages is that people can learn from each other. Students may get help from older students with their homework, and children learn how to read from senior citizens. Another advantage is that the library will be used for small exhibitions, concerts, and talk events to draw people to the place and create a good cultural environment for the community. (95 words)
